

Water, oxygen, carbon dioxide, and acids are significant agents of .

- chemical weathering
- abrasion
- mechanical weathering
- erosion

Groundwater tends to flow through bodies of rock or sediment that _____.

- are composed of dark silicate minerals
- have a high porosity
- have a high permeability
- are aquitards

An accretionary wedge is a typical feature found along _____.

- Mid-ocean ridges
- Above hot spots
- Subduction zones
- Divergent plate boundaries